The more I got involved with the project, the more I could see a lot of answers for myself. Now, about that table at Rao's.

Flashing Before My Eyes: 50 Years of... book by Dick Schaap

Bill Mauldin: a Pulitzer Prize-winning cartoonist who commented on World War II, the Cold War, and the Kennedy Assassination, among many other matters. Garry Trudeau: the creator of the Doonesbury cartoon, in 1975 he became the first person to win a Pulitzer Prize for a comic strip. John Reed: a journalist and political activist, he is best known for his 1919 book Ten Days That Shook the World, which was a first-hand account of the Bolshevik Revolution.

MEMOIRS

So how and why did La Belle Province decide to upend the truth of its past? It consisted of one play for every decade of the 20th century, a trajectory that went from the aftermath of slavery through the Great Migration and the to the dawn of gentrification. Theodore White: a political journalist and historian who pioneered behind-the-scenes campaign reporting in his book The Making of the President: 1960, the first of many in the series. Nat Hentoff: who with his Village Voice column, which began in 1957, crusaded, even against some liberal orthodoxies, for civil liberties.

Why Nabokov's Speak, Memory Still Speaks to Us

At UNC, he and was named the national college player of the year. So now they're caught between the devil and the deep blue sea, and that's the tragedy of the place.

Nice copy of an interesting story. .

Fifty Years With The Golden Rule

Linda Greenhouse: a Pulitzer Prize-winning reporter who covered the US Supreme Court for the New York Times for more than 25 years, beginning in 1978. The book is a joy from beginning to end. I grabbed this off the new books shelf at the library.
