Should I see you, I shall acknowledge you with affection. Abstract Composition is a medium-sized rectangular oil painting on board by the British artist Jessica Dismorr. I guess its custodians must have guessed that it would be happier in the dark, not being looked at.

Jessica Dismorr: the radical pioneer of Vorticism

The bold lines remain but they have an organic solidity. In reading the radical prose vortices which Dismorr contributed to the Blast! Here, the simplified elements suggest arches, piers and girders, suspended in a darkened, undefined space.

A Fauve type composition, Pyrenean Town, was reproduced in reviews of the show and also shown at the. The Grade I listed Queen Anne townhouse is home to one of the largest collections of British pop art internationally. The work of Jessica Dismorr 1885-1939 has been described as encapsulating 'the stylistic developments of twentieth-century British Art', and her oeuvre certainly encompasses some its most exciting moments--from Rhythm in the early 1910s, through Vorticism, towards post-war modernist figuration and finally into the abstraction she shared with radical political artists groups in the 1930s.

Jann Haworth: Close Up and Radical Women: Jessica Dismorr and her Contemporaries, review

The passion of the romantics is hyperbolised as she moves from personal passion and emotion to aesthetic rationality. I seek the profoundest teachings of the inanimate. Her research explores ideas of textuality in early Anglo-Saxon poetic manuscripts, and the printed books and paraphernalia of some post-1930s poets, including David Jones.
