Imperialism Archives

Soviet foreign policy was confronted with the task of consolidating the peace and cultivating with all countries the economic relations indispensable to the exchange of goods, which would help rebuild and develop the national economy under conditions of capitalist encirclement. They imagined a world made for one, a planet that could be swallowed by a single great power.

No to chauvinist war

The diplomats of most states helped organize anti-Soviet rebellions. According to them, socialism can be established through reforms, through the parliamentary road, even by using the old state machine. The proposals accepted were: i setting up Indo-US Army executive steering council; ii reciprocal visits by senior commanders; iii regular staff talks between the two armies; iv reciprocal training and individual training programmes; v unit training exchanges and observations of training services; vi combined training activities; vii US and Indian army participation in the Pacific

Command Joint Committee level meeting programmes; viii personnel exchange programme; ix collective training information exchange and cooperation.
