This proposition speaks only of what can be conceived, not of what exists,.

Pirates & Revolutionaries: Nietzsche, Thus Spoke Zarathustra, Part 3, Sect. 48

There are peoples whose religion has been made by neither climate nor government. It was at a party there : some girls were making fun of a young doctor of philosophy, who had retired alone into a window-niche, looking severe, and evidently absorbed in thought, while the rest of the company were assembled round the tea-table. To the Europeans, the idea that there were a few basic physical principles from which everything else could be deduced seemed quite natural, for they had the example of Euclid before them.
