So, I jumped into my bed and relaxed my body. Summer's ardent rustling Is like a festival outside my window. There came a time when even the curtains were too far away for it.

The Deserted House poem

Fall's not in air; frost has not hit the leaves; But the marsh smells of blackberries and hay.

“The Sentence” A poem on the relationship by Anna Akhmatova

I decided that, since I was working in a library, I should have a library degree, and spent the academic year 1952-53 in the University of Toronto Library School, where I obtained my B. Through its warm sea a shark was already swimming: my future. It was stiff with outstretched wings.

And there will be no one. I have lived a quiet, rather dull life, teaching, writing, having books published, sometimes taking a year off. Any simpleton faced with this sight will laugh: my ears are deafened by the blank page in front of me.

The Deserted House Poem by Alfred Lord Tennyson

What I have written here is the skeleton of a life.

26 Hauntingly Beautiful Photos of Abandoned Homes Across America

I wrote a long, rambling fiction, a fantasy about two children, a boy and a girl, who wandered away from home into an enchanted forest, where they encountered a princess who lived in a castle and sang to the accompaniment of a harp.

Descriptive Essay

The secret is not to keep going, patiently, until you come, by now old and very wise, to an island where old age may rest. Vacant, Abandoned Home in Texas. I was told that I was a very frail and tiny child, that my mother doubted if she would manage to keep me alive.
