The Paris Review

Nourri par la lecture de , de et de , Henry trouve un idéal dans le courage et les vertus antiques.

Henry de Montherlant

The major formative event of his youth was his fifteen-month stay at the boarding school of Sainte-Croix, beginning in January 1911. Montherlant's literary works respond to some degree to the same treatment: his sexuality shaped his personal philosophy and therefore the philosophy of his central characters, and this created a kind of code as well.

Henry de Montherlant

For him, homosocial bonding was not a means to a political end, but an aesthetic and sexual end in itself.

This combination of social pressures and Montherlant's own sexual politics gave those preoccupations a new shape: the trope of the medieval knight. He was also a talented draughtsman and after 1913 resorted to hiring young people in the street for nude modelling. » Il oppose les valeurs de la « guerre », que les soldats vivent sur le champ de bataille, à celles de la « paix ».
