Latvijas Republikas Ministru Kabinets: Tiesību aktu projekti

Recognizing that the general measures of 1965 had not resulted in any dramatic improvement in the supply situation, and that in this context it was going to be very difficult to control organizational-autarkical tendencies, the authorities sought through the establishment of production associations to create rationalized combinations of main-activity and ancillary enterprises which would at least cut the cost, in terms of transport and excess capacity, of organizational autarky.

Once the Soviet economy had settled down to a more normal relationship between the two kinds of investment, the power of the command principle could no longer match the power of shop- 30 Restructuring the Soviet economy floor defensive reaction. . The answer is probably both, although the evidence is conflicting and inconclusive.

Restructuring the Soviet Economy

There are plenty of references in policy statements, plan and plan-fulfilment documents, and in the professional literature...to this dimension of labour productivity growth, and also to the notable results obtained in this regard in many enterprises or branches. Decentralized investments financed from the production development fund should be decided on independently by the association or enterprise, but then incorporated into the ministerial plan.

Perhaps the most striking feature of the 1965 provisions was that they involved virtually no overall decentralization of the system. This is essentially what the Stakhanovite movement was. Joint ventures are subject both to profits tax basic rate 30 per cent and repatriation tax basic rate 20 per cent , but with a tax holiday for foreign partners for two years from the date on which profits are first generated.
