The immigration official may then issue the study permit to the student. The Government of Canada and most provinces work together in order to provide financial aid for prospective students.

International Students in Canada Apply for Financial Aid

How to Apply All the information you need to apply is available. As with a scholarship, students who receive bursaries do not have to pay the money back. As their name suggests, these must be paid back.

Affidavit of Support for a Student

The contact details for this can be found. Written confirmation of scholarships, bursaries, or loans may be submitted as proof of financial support. You can ask them for these much-coveted funds either in the form of loans or charitable funds.

Canadian Centennial Scholarship Fund

The prospective student will need to present the Letter of Introduction to the immigration official when arriving in Canada. No need to visit multiple admission offices and fill individual forms. Most international students with a valid study permit may also work up to 20 hours off-campus per week during the semester, and full-time during scheduled breaks.
