15 Unsolved Ocean Mysteries That'll Keep You Up At Night

Examples of marine life that live in the deep oceans include prawns 7,000 meters deep , snailfish 7,400 meters deep , and cusk eel 6,500 meters deep.

15 Unsolved Ocean Mysteries That'll Keep You Up At Night

We do know that many commercially important species like shrimps, crabs, groupers, rockfish, and snappers rely on deep sea coral reefs for shelter, but this is only based upon a limited number of studies and dives.

15 Mind

It continues to decrease to the bottom, but the rate is much slower.

The Deep Ocean

While something like the gulper eel, with its massive expandable gullet, is a rare and amazing sight and could almost be mistaken for an alien. There is so much more to learn, so many more unknown species to discover, and in this documentary they just show amazing things, things we couldn't imagine before but with the new technologies everything seems so closer to us now.

Deep sea

Squid, krill, jellies, and fish are super abundant in this zone. If Mount Everest was put into this chasm, it would still be more than a mile from breaking the surface of the water.

The Deep Ocean

Each zone has a different mix of species adapted to its specific light level, pressure, temperature, and community. Greenland Sharks have been found with a polar bear jaw, an entire reindeer, horse bones, and a moose hide in their stomachs.

Deep sea

The average depth of the World Ocean is 3.
