Indeed, if the structural proposals in Patten are implemented we will have a police service accountable to, in touch with, and governed by the community it serves, while, if the CJR is implemented we will have a raft of other smaller but not unimportant criminal justice services run by the civil service, less accountable and more removed from the community they are supposed to serve than that provided for by the existing situation. One of the most successful ways to reduce anti-social behaviour is to focus on family-based and pre-school programmes.

The chapter then proceeds to ask the question where does crime occur? Moreover, it is hard to ascertain just how much of the expenditure goes on the bureaucracy administering the programmes.

Northern Ireland Policing Board

In Schedule 1, paragraph 58. This did not include any private sector concern with under 26 employees and a number of public sector employees, such as those employed in the security services.

However, it is important to bear in mind that the two organisations have very different functions. Part III The police force 18 General functions of the police force 1 It shall be the general duty of members of the police forceâ a to protect life and property; b to preserve order; c to prevent the commission of offences; d where an offence has been committed, to take measures to bring the offender to justice. The terms of reference given to the Review were therefore very wide and provided ample space for an in depth and independent analysis of the purposes, philosophy and politics of a modern criminal justice system.

Police (Northern Ireland) Act 1998

If it means anything other than co-option, putting a restorative gloss on a basically retributive system, however, it must mean mainstreaming local community involvement in the criminal justice system. People receive help not as a universal right but only if they fulfil certain obligations and responsibilities Garland 1996. If the CJR was serious about the worry about crime then it should have recommended that crime statistics should be published alongside a range of other harmful statistics numbers in poverty, road accidents, accidents at work, iatrogenesis, food-poisoning, loss of homes through flooding and pollution.

Instead of a focus on substantive issues of income distribution and poverty the focus is now on processual issues. As these police statistics under-record the extent of crime, since 1982 there have been bi-annual surveys in England and Wales and less frequent sweeps in Northern Ireland to ascertain who has been the victim of a crime.
