Author's Advice to White Teachers in Urban Schools: Drop the 'Savior Complex' and Learn from Students

The , a new interactive produced by our colleagues at the , indicates that only about half of sub-Saharan Africa's 128 million school-aged children currently attending school are likely to acquire the basic skills needed for them to live healthy and productive lives. This requirement assumes that certification ensures skill. We need more graduates of urban schools - from all cultural and language groups - returning to teach in them.

My wife brought me some from her school in a different district. I know the educational problem is very, very complex. We might get one field trip at the end of the year, after the State Test.

Response: 'Teachers Don't Leave High

Start where the hurt is greatest. I teach my kids how to use a 50 cent protractor then after the lesson, I must collect them and pass them to another teacher. The Kopps Bill, which would have fixed this, needs to be reintroduced or made into an initiative so that we can correct this corporate loophole.
