Dithyrambs

Weep no more, Pale Duda! The clearest sense of dithyramb as proto-tragedy comes from a surviving dithyramb by Bacchylides, though it was composed after tragedy had already developed fully.

Dionysos Dithyramben [F Nietzsche]

Now I cast my hook towards all solitary ones: Give an answer to the impatience of the flame, Catch me, fisherman on high mountains, My seventh ultimate solitude! What do you want, highwayman, from me?. Image and Idea in Fifth Century Greece: Art and Literature After the Persian Wars.

Dithyrambos

. Why hasn't anyone beheld Your mute beauty Why doesn't it escape my gaze? Finally, there's still time to catch Michael Werner Gallery's display of Markus Lupertz's tent paintings from the 1960s: examples of what Liipertz calls ' dithyrambs' a reference to ecstatic Dionysian lyrics , these tents are pitched somewhere between abstraction and figuration, calling attention to their own poeticism of line.

Dionysian

Forgive me an old after-dinner song, which I once composed among the daughters of the desert. .

Drei Dithyramben

Other three poems Klage der Ariadne, Nur Narr! In the role of translator, R. Stone grinds against stone, the desert devours and strangles, Glowing brown monstrous death stares And chews; its life is to chew.

Die Lieder des Bakchylides, Zweiter Teil

Dionysus-Dithyrambs In the fading light of dusk, When the dew's solace begins To well down to the earth, Invisible, as well as unheard For the comforter dew slips on Delicate footwear as all gentle consolers Then do you remember, remember, hot heart, How once you thirsted After heavenly tears and dewdrops, Scorched and weary, thirsting, While on yellow paths of grass The spiteful evening glances of the sun Ran around you through black trees, Glowing sun-glances, dazzling with malicious delight.
