Zimin also experimented with photography in the late 1920s and early 1930s, producing photograms akin to those made by László Moholy-Nagy and others at the time.

In Memoriam

The images Albers used to make these collages fall rather neatly into four categories — portraits, mannequins, the natural world, and the built environment — and Albers attends to a remarkably narrow subsection within each of these: The portraits feature only people Albers knew well — fellow Bauhäusler, family, and friends. Other books using Kurelek's own words or images or both were published after his death, for example, Fox Mykyta 1978 , The Ukrainian Pioneer 1980 , The Polish Canadians 1981 , They Sought the New World 1985 , To My Father's Village 1988 , William Kurelek's Huronia Mission Paintings 1991 , and Kurelek Country 1999.
