The association between the Cistercians and Ephraim is made here again, for the oth 29Turning to Super Prophetas, Reeves finds a similar dichotomy. More importantly, when one considers that Charles was fighting on behalf of the Roman Church against its excommunicated enemies, Manfred and later Conradin, who both employed Muslim troops, as Super Prophetas mentions, the crusading tone that Troncarelli perceives makes absolute sense in the context of the 1260s. Dopo varie perlustrazioni, si fermò nel luogo oggi denominato , attualmente nel comune di.

While noting the badly-garbled nature of the text, Hermann determines that this fourteenth-century manuscript must have been directly based on a thirteenth-century one from Italy ; its distinct variations have allowed later scholars to determine readily its relation to other manuscripts. However, Ecce in provinciis istis comes at the very beginning in two surviving manuscripts, quite probably because they are derived from an earlier copy in which the quires were out of order.
