List of Theses

The ancestral Permian basin is characterized by weak crustal extension and low in which the Tobosa basin developed.

More data point to potential in S. Colorado sub

If this were a typical federal site, the National Environmental Policy Act NEPA would require that an EIS be conducted. Colorado has many structural basins formed during two phases of its geologic evolution: three formed during the Pennsylvanian-Permian Ancestral Rockies event, and eight during the Upper Cretaceous-Paleogene Laramide event. As you know, this monthly publication is the primary means through which our community is informed about upcoming events.

List of Theses

An increasing number of studies in recent years have demonstrated that significant progradation of shallow marine systems occurs under conditions of base-level fall. The quality of the organic matter kerogen reported for the Mancos and the Lewis shales is mostly of Type III gas-prone with Type II being less dominant.

Sedimentary Response to Forced Regression (Geological Society Special Publication)

Because of their widespread extent in this area they are included with the Colorado Plateaus regional aquifers. As the water slows down, or the river changes course, the material settles out as alluvium.
