Statute of Limitations as a Defence Firstly, it is important to recognize that the Statute of Limitations is a statutory defence. Another way of putting this is to say that she will have such knowledge if she so firmly believes that her condition is capable of being attributed to an act or omission which she can identify in broad terms that she goes to a solicitor to seek advice about making a claim for compensation; 4 on the other hand, she will not have the requisite knowledge if she thinks she knows the acts or omissions she should investigate but in fact is barking up the wrong tree: or if her knowledge of what the defendant did or did not do is so vague or general that she cannot fairly be expected to know what she should investigate; or if her state of mind is such that she thinks her condition is capable of being attributed to the act or omission alleged to constitute negligence, but she is not sure about this, and would need to check with an expert before she could be properly said to know that it was. Commissioning a new modern mental health inpatient hospital is of major strategic importance to the Trust.

In line with most standard conditions of employment of architects we also offer alternative dispute resolution services such as mediation and arbitration, in addition to litigation services.

When (and where) is an apology an admission of liability?

The Manchester team has added a claims handling unit this year. It was held that loss was suffered on the date of transfer of the pension in 1997 because he then held a more risky pension product. Harm or loss can take a variety of forms, including economic loss, psychiatric illness, or harm to property.

Understanding Legal Liability for Architects

Often with timely advice matters for which an architect may be found negligent can be resolved at an early stage with far less consequences in terms of damage to reputation and monetary damages.
