An Australian Folk Song A Day: One of the Has

In 1957 Members of the Folklore Society of Victoria most notably Norm O'Connor and Maryjean Officer commence field recording of traditional singers in Victoria. Country and folk artists such as , , , , , and of the band have continued to record and popularise the old bush ballads of Australia through the 20th and into the 21st century — and contemporary artists including and draw heavily on this heritage. Others influenced by the genre include , , Jagged Stone and.
