Landslide hazard zonation mapping using frequency ratio and fuzzy logic approach, a case study of Lachung Valley, Sikkim

GIS —based approaches were also used to assess the causes and factors that trigger landslides in different parts of the Ethiopian highlands Abebe et al. Figures 12 and 13 show that, the land subsidence on the outskirts of Kerman will resume if usage of ground water continues with current speed. Meanwhile, Mn²⁺ and Fe²⁺ at the DCZ were closer to that of the regional groundwater.

These major deeper lineaments have controlled the growth of the Triassic salt dome mainly during the Albo-Aptian as revealed by pinch outs of these series in direction of the crest of the structure. Community Turnover The composition turnover between communities was estimated using Euclidean distances calculated on the Hellinger transformed contingency table of sequence reads, per MOTU and samples.
