Anatomy, biogenesis, and regeneration of salivary glands

Their location in adult glands is often described in relation to the main epithelial compartments of the gland: the ductal, acinar or myoepithelial cells.

Handouts

Injection sites into the fetlock joint 40. What is the primary oral cavity function? Results of the CT examination, transverse and sagittal sections of the heads, revealed that the donkeys possessed large, symmetrical guttural pouches incompletely divided into medial and lateral compartments by the stylohyoid bone. In humans there are genetic diseases affecting salivary glands that inform us about salivary gland biogenesis.

Anatomic and magnetic resonance imaging features of the salivary glands in the dog

In this article, we shall look at the location, vasculature and innervation of the parotid gland.

Anatomy, biogenesis, and regeneration of salivary glands

The projection of confocal sections show immunostaining of the epithelium blue, parasympathetic nerves green, and blood vessels red of an E13 mouse SMG. Damage to facial nerve or its branches will cause paralysis of the facial muscles.

Mucous membrane The surfaces of the oral cavity are mostly lined by a mucous membrane - the oral mucosa.
