Werreldt Kaert: Geographicus Rare Antique Maps

Curiously, the labels for and are reversed, with Europe scribed in red and gold as 'Africa', and vice versa. It is therefore impossible to include on the map a number of symbols, such as those showing cultivated and derelict places, harbours and waters, reefs and shoals in the sea, on what side of the aforementioned harbours they occur, for which winds the harbours are suitable and for which they are contrary, how many vessels they will contain and so on. In one of the major deviations from the earlier 1658 Visscher map, here, after a small strait, the land of Nova Albion continues westward towards Asia until passing off the map, notably not to reappear on the opposite hemisphere.
