Elliott Carter's Flute Music

On the other hand, despite the breadth of music to which the theories are applied analytically, we have seen that they do not adequately account for the role of texture in Carter's music. A primary stream behaviour is one which can define a stream by itself when all other properties and behaviours are equal. If the changes are too severe, the listener will not perceive a single continuous stream but rather one stream being displaced by another.

Carter, Elliott 1908

Let us assume that we can assert that the violin, cello, bass and left hand piano form a textural component on the basis of rhythmic similarity in music. The Writings of Henry Cowell: A Descriptive Bibliography. Regensburg: Gustav Bosse Verlag, 1990, pp.

Stuyvesant, NY: Pendragon Press, 2000, pp. Contemporary Composers on Contemporary Music. In 'Sandpiper', Example 7, the piano and string events form a stream because of their parity of pitch content: pitches in the piano are duplicated in the strings.

Texture in Elliott Carter's A mirror on which to dwell

These songs are characterized by similar textural processes, which help to delineate the form of the songs and to portray musically the meaning of the text.

Elliott Carter List of Works

The Music of Elliott Carter. In 'O Breath', the fourth poem in a group of four, the alienation between two lovers is again expressed through the thoughts of a woman, while her partner sleeps. I would also like to thank my dissertation committee for their guidance: Professors William Benjamin, Gregory Butler and Eugene Wilson.
