It is likely he was brought up in the household of distant relations of his mother, the Veseys, whose name he adopted as his own. See Four Oaks
Nowadays, for those of us with little capital, Four Oaks is looked upon as 'snobby' - where the residents stand aloof and out of touch with reality.
The Partnership Learning Centre was originally a Postgraduate Medical Centre and was opened on 15 July 1967 by Sir Max Rosenheim, the then President of the Royal College of Physicians.
