John Buchan

The book certainly reads more like a collection of short stories than a novel but there is a thread that runs through all the stories, embodied in a gold ring handed down through the generations. Essays and Apothegms of Francis Lord Bacon 1894 Walter Scott Publishing Co Musa Piscatrix 1896 Various 1901 The Long Road to Victory 1920 Various Miscellanies: Literary and Historical 1921 Great Hours in Sport 1921 Various The Nations of Today 1923—24 Various Six unnumbered volumes A History of English Literature 1923 Various Abridged and published in 1937 as A Shorter History of English Literature. This comprehensive companion to Buchan's mystery fiction includes entries on the characters, novels, short fiction, films, themes and symbols with special attention to the serialized secret agent Richard Hannay, Buchan's most famous character.

E.X. Ferrars: a Companion to the Mystery Fiction

A ring is passed along the line of families throughout the ages, not always through the first born or the male line until the final chapter which took me completely by surprise. The McFarland Companion series, edited by Elizabeth Foxwell, has been consistently excellent, both in its choice of subjects and its quality of scholarship and writing. One serious error: the late San Francisco Chronicle reviewer and well-known mystery writer Lenore Glen Offord becomes Leonard.

This comprehensive companion to Buchan's mystery fiction includes entries on the characters, novels, short fiction, films, themes and symbols with special attention to the serialized secret agent Richard Hannay, Buchan's most famous character. These happen to be the two stories in the book that most stood out for me. I'd heard of Buchan years ago 39 Steps , but never came across a copy until recently.

The Path Of The King by John Buchan

I found the t A very interesting book, and somewhat different from the other John Buchan books I have recently read. Buchan published the best-selling The Thirty-Nine Steps in 1915, one of 40 novels of his long career, which also included 60 works of non-fiction.
