Masaccio Paintings, Bio, Ideas

Both stories do appear in the most popular late Medieval compendium of Saints lives, The frescoes of Filippino Lippi incorporate the heads of contemporary Florentines, including a self-portrait as the figure on the far right of the scene of the Disputation with Simon Magus.

Masaccio, The Tribute Money in the Brancacci Chapel

His father was Ser Giovanni di Mone Cassai, a , while his mother, Monna Iacopa, was the daughter of an innkeeper. Where he had been between his birth and his 21st year remains, like so much about him, a tantalizing mystery. Left unfinished, the project was only completed in 1485, by 1457-1504.

The figures do, however, reveal a complete understanding of the revolutionary art of , the founder of the Florentine Renaissance sculptural style, whose early works Masaccio studied with care. All of the frescoes in the chapel tell the story of the life of St.

The Tribute Money (Masaccio)

Their family crest is well visible on the sides of the current altar. The choice of episodes from the life of the St. Masolino had begun working on the Brancacci Chapel two or three years before Masaccio did and it is still difficult to determine which frescoes were painted by Masaccio and not Masolino.

Masaccio, The Tribute Money in the Brancacci Chapel

Masaccio was born Tommaso di Ser Giovanni di Simone Cassai in the winter of 1401 in a town close to Florence. In 1771, the church and its were damaged by fire. This work shows Masaccio's use of perspective and of Chiaroscuro, the contrast of light and dark in a picture and the painting was restored in the 1980s after suffering neglect for centuries.

Masaccio Paintings, Bio, Ideas

Some of the best examples are fresco series which tell a story, usually that of an important figure or event from the Bible. This triptych, consisting of the Madonna enthroned, two adoring angels, and saints, was painted for the Church of San Giovenale in the town of Cascia, near San Giovanni Valdarno. However, Masaccio was called to Rome before he could finish the chapel, and died in Rome at the age of 27.

He also painted three scenes dealing with the life of St Peter on the altar wall, the fourth is by Masolino. On the latter date he entered the Florentine Arte dei Medici e Speziali, the guild to which painters belonged. Though the painting has a narrative subject, Masaccio has focused on the harmonious arrangement of figures rather than the storyline.
