Although the Welsh had followed the Roman lead in observing Easter since 768, in other matters of faith they were unacceptably independent.

The Celtic Catholic Church

One cannot dispense with outward monasticism, but one must never be satisfied with it alone.

The Celts in Wales

The wall was designed to protect the conquering Roman settlers from the Celts who had fled north. But even such advice should also be checked with the teachings of the Holy Fathers. They are thought to have been brought to Britain and Ireland by roaming bands of hunter-gatherers over many millennia and, after 3,000BC, by the first female farmers from the Fertile Crescent region of Western Asia.
