

Last days of Jesus - a poem

[s.n.] - Last Days of Jesus

Carve your name into the cross-- your grief is what He's bearing, it's for you He sheds His blood, it's for you He's caring.
Take a sharpened stone or stick and mark into the wood.
Do you have splinters? He has worse, tho' He's done naught but good for you. So why do you hold back and gaze upon Him sadly?
Carve your name into the cross:
He bears your burden gladly.
Carve your name into the rock that no more hides the tomb.
Witness of the Lord's return and gaze upon the room:
the garments folded, bright as though His blood had never poured upon the cloth; the earthen shelf where His remains were stored, but now are gone. The Son of Man is risen from the dead.
Carve your name into the rock, rejoice, and raise your head.
