Edouard Manet by Pierre Courthion

Pfere Tanguy lost his head. In diversions and amuse- ment different natures and tempera- ments take their pleasures in different ways.

Édouard Manet.

The preparation was very much like that for his reply to Hayne, as de- livered.

Rhythm— that is the prime secret of his vitality. But 'now I'm just going to run away — they'll be calling for me again - At that moment Mifflin entered. Dowered by nature with extraordinary acuity of vision, with a roman- tic, passionate nature and a will of steel, Fortuny was boind to become a great painter.

Promenades of an Impressionist by Huneke, James, 1860

They gave him his scientific formulas after he had worked out the problems. He was admired, imi- tated, above all parodied; though, jealously as are his pictures guarded, he has been put on 124 SIX SPANIARDS the shelf like one of the amazing painted bibelots in his work. The London pictures tell of the older artist — not so vigorous, a vein of tenderness beginning to show instead of his youthful blazing optimism.
