Islamic State confirms death of Abu Bakr al

He was also made commander of a small expedition that set out to attack and destroy the tribes of and , who were plundering nearby villages. Speculation abounds about the man and the significance of his appointment. Due to different style of commands, there was a slowdown in the pace of operations, as Abu Ubaida moved slowly and steadily, in contrast to Khalid who is said to rush 'like a tornado from battle to battle'; using surprise, audacity and brute force to win his battles.

Abu Musab al

Having mustered sizeable armies at Antioch, Heraclius sent them to reinforce strategically important areas of northern Syria, like Emesa and Chalcis.
