Porphyry In Timaeum Fr. XXXVII (Philoponus De aeternitate mundi contra Proclum 148 9

Far from being able to discern two different natures in Christ, we should speak of one complex or combined nature mia phýsis súnthetos. We can thus say that all things, except the Supreme Being, are made by him out of nothing in the sense that they are not made out of anything, and no absurdity results.
