Moving Forward: A conversation with Black educators about the future for Black students

They are these dueling identities that are often at odds with each other. For the second trimester, I give students the Conference Note sheet and have them reflect on their learning and if goals were met. They can explain it to the students to make everyone understand it better.

Response: Strategies for Effective Parent

He would like to see education as change and learning, not our current school system of order and compliance. The city is known to have one of the best public-education systems in the county, which is a huge attraction. I suggest brainstorming together on the best ways to help because you all are working in partnership.

Why Educators Should Create More Inclusive Conversations in the Classroom

The Miletas frame these touchstone texts with commentary explaining why these writers resonate for them, sharing not only the personal meanings they have derived from the selections but why these writings have endured in the field over time. As educators, if we focus on the three areas below, the conference will be productive, flow smoothly, and increase the partnership between the teacher and the parent.

Patricia Carini, A letter to teachers and parents on some ways of looking at and reflecting on children

Think about it—you will never have a better chance than you do during this meeting.

Why Educators Should Create More Inclusive Conversations in the Classroom

Often after an art class or another class requiring a lot of equipment, students will have made a mess. As educational fads and jargon come and go, parents and teachers alike will appreciate and find value in the wisdom distilled here.
