九九八十一 (Jiǔjiǔbāshíyī)

From the Yuan Dynasty 1271—1368 to the Qing Dynasty 1644—1912 , the Eastern Zhejiang Canal lost its privilege but remained navigable. Though one of the northernmost sections, its name derives from its position relative to Tianjin. This portion of the canal was used to transport troops to what is now the border region during the 598—614.
