We are taught nature, the planets, our sun and stars are just inanimate material objects; yet through these books in the I AM series we are able to value the real nature of the universe. The first has to do with desires and aversions, that they may never fail to get what they desire, nor fall into what they avoid; the second with cases of choice and of refusal, and, in general, with duty, that they may act in an orderly fashion, upon good reasons, and not carelessly; the third with the avoidance of error and rashness in judgment, and, in general, about cases of assent. This drift has made it possible, indeed essential, to contemplate discourse from multiple viewpoints: linguistic, philosophical, cognitive, social, anthropological, literary, historical, political, and ideological.

Twenty discourses preached before the University of Cambridge in the year 1820 : Benson, Christopher, 1789
