Strengthen Women's Political Participation and Decision

Perhaps most profoundly, gender influences the very ways we organize and think about the world and our way of knowing about the world. Third, further research is needed to understand the usefulness of the personality and values explanations discussed here.

Strengthening Women's Rights and Political Participation

More work theorizing and analyzing these distinctive dimensions is needed.

In contrast, more recent contextual explanations offer an alternative perspective. At the same time, public acceptance of wage-earning jobs for young unmarried women was growing.

Attitudes Toward Women and the Influence of Gender on Political Decision Making

With respect to policy preferences, less research has focused on these attitudes as predictors of issue positions. Feminism and nationalism in the third world. If you decide, instead, to keep working, some who stayed home will say that you are selfishly putting yourself first.

Achieving culture change in politics requires leaders to listen when women speak up

Then I could come home and give all my attention to my kids.
