His discharge rested, apparently, on the argument that his benefices were subject to the clerical disme, subject also, therefore, to the clerical subsidy, and that he had no land, tenements or other lay hereditaments whereby he could be taxed as a lay person. Subsequently, the Richards family also married into one of the founding families of Hampstead located along the Patapsco - Conewago Road in what is currently Carroll County. A new odium, likewise, by these representations, was attempted to be thrown upon Buckingham.
