Whose nose was most awfully bent. Joseph Severn, A Life: The Rewards of Friendship.

A poem on the times. By Miss Fell

. You gave me a shoulder to cry on You were my pillar when I was falling You were my strength when I felt low With your smile, you made my living on earth worthwhile.

Poems for funerals

A Study of Keats and His Friends. During the 19th century, critics disregarded them as distractions from his poetic works. Money was always a great concern and difficulty for him, as he struggled to stay out of debt and make his way in the world independently.
