Funeral Monuments and Human Remains from Jebel al-Buhais. During this period, the general health of the population has improved, the average family size has grown, and the mean life expectancy has increased. My particular inspirational moment was 16 years ago in Berlin when the late Wolfgang Taute of Cologne University presented his insightful assessments of Ramat Tamar and Metzad Mazal, the Neolithic flint mine and accompanying tool-production sites located southwest of the Dead Sea, to a group of international scholars.

The misrepresentation of our work needs to be addressed. The sample CO₂ is measured relative to an internal laboratory tank gas standard which is calibrated against internal and international carbonate standards etc. In addition, isotope values for Strontium, Oxygen and Carbon, obtained from tooth enamel of selected human individuals, are presented in the catalog in order to make them accessible for other researchers.

The centuries that followed witnessed the introduction of the underground falaj irrigation system and the cultivation of dates and other cereal crops. Similarities in burial rituals — of laying animals to rest with their owners — and vessels, decorations and small bronze snake figures have also been unearthed.
