Angela Cole

Today more than two hundred G-5 155mm howitzers exist within the arsenals of Iraq. FRED QUELLE, Government Defense Physicist: Gerald Bull was an essential ingredient to any program such as this and in my opinion, if an activity like this were going on, wild horses would not keep Gerald Bull from being in the middle of it.

Arms and the Man

FOSS: Basically, the Chinese had a large number of old systems of Soviet design. Due to what they see as inequities in Bull's treatment by PRB over their co-ownership of Belgian-based SRC International, the family is not a great fan of the company.

Doomsday Gun (TV Movie 1994)

Bull had been arguably the greatest gun scientist of the century. Monique watched from the driveway as Bull let himself in and walked to the waiting elevators. An interesting layout of the life and times of Dr.

Arms and the Man

Army and the Canadian government were funding HARP. He did not report the intrusions to the Belgian police but did inform Iraqi minister whilst at the Baghdad exhibition, who offered to provide him with a full-time bodyguard.

Doomsday Gun (TV Movie 1994)

Over the summer, the remains of Schwerer Gustav were studied by Soviet specialists and in autumn of the same year were moved to Merseburg, where the Soviets were gathering German military material.

Angela Cole

My god that is scary. If this is true, then it stinks.

The Man Who Made The Supergun

Iraq first acquired the G-5 155mm artillery piece in the early 1980s from South Africa. Despite his ability and genius, Bull ran into road blocks throughout his career.
