The area is managed by USDA Forest Service and South Carolina Dept.

Habitat Management

With about 75% of moist-soil management units currently under water, LSU AgCenter area wildlife and forestry agent said early-season drawdown of flooded areas may be delayed. Sturdy branches that grow at right angles from the trunk are requisite for easy perching.

Karner blue butterfly by Lindsay Webb During pre-colonial times, Native Americans commonly used fire to enhance hunting opportunities, improve travel through forests, and enhance berry production, among other things.

Wildlife Management

Migratory shorebirds, raptors and neotropical landbirds use this area in great numbers and up to 50 percent of all dabbling ducks in the Atlantic Flyway winter here. Beau Bauer of the Nemours Wildlife Foundation and Kennedy Center will talk about the ecology and management of aquatic invertebrates in brackish wetlands, followed by Gillie Croft, also of the Nemours Wildlife Foundation and Kennedy Center, who will talk about wood duck and whistling wood duck nest box use in South Carolina. Overall, researchers estimate that about 44 percent of Ohio deer are infected with the parasite.
