The sky has been too much neglected in every school of landscape art which has existed in the world ; but with the increase of that simplicity in the selection of meadow, wold, and reedy bank as the subjects of poetical pictures, of which we spoke at the beginning, painters may have more leisure for the lovely illuminations, the pomp and the processions of the clouds, and the infinite varieties of the firmament of heaven.

Final Honour School

Sarnuelson adduces from Evelyn, as an instance, a supper given by the Duke of Buckingham when the Prince of Orange was over on a visit, on which occasion the king made the prince drink hard though he could not have required much mak- ing , under the influence of which, the Dutchman broke the windows of the chambers of the maids of honour, with other mischiefs.
