La Femme de Gilles

Sappho, Fragment 47, translation Anne Carson The wound she carries in her heart, the latent suffering she feels welling up in her, is there to remind her of the fragility of this moment. There are confrontations, Elisa even seeks out a priest to help her in resolving her pain but the priest doesn't pay attention and Elisa is left with silence. Marital martyrdom at its most devastating.

La Femme de Gilles

Cornillac does an excellent job as the boorish, lustful wannabe lover and husband. Her silence about what she sees is really what seals her fate.

The events are seen entirely through Elisa's eyes and Emmanuelle Devos' enigmatic performance betrays little of her thoughts.
