Principle 3 Cooperation and collaboration. Laws, regulations or other arrangements provide a framework for cooperation and collaboration with relevant domestic authorities and foreign supervisors. These arrangements reflect the need to protect confidential information.¹ Essential criteria E3.1 Arrangements, formal or informal, are in place for cooperation, including analysis and sharing of information, and undertaking collaborative work, with all domestic authorities with responsibility for the safety and soundness of banks, other financial institutions and/or the stability of the financial system. There is evidence that these arrangements work in practice, where necessary. Description and findings re E3.1 There are adequate arrangements in place for the cooperation between the FMA as the integrated supervisory authority in Austria and the OeNB, with specific responsibilities for the bank and insurance supervision. The analysis also found this view upon the interviews held with staff and management of the OeNB and FMA respectively upon the working relationships described in case we discussed and upon the positive reactions received from the industry. The responsibilities of the OeNB and the arrangements for cooperation are defined in the NBS and the Banking Act, especially Article 79. Article 79, among others, sets out that a joint database of banking supervision analysis will be utilized, that FMA will mandate OeNB to undertake inspections at institutions, prepare expert opinions make individual bank analyses and that the FMA will rely on these inspections, opinions and analyses to the greatest possible extent in the execution of its supervisory tasks. Given that the FMA is an integrated supervisory authority, executing different supervisory objectives, the FMA should also have internal arrangements for cross-sector collaboration. Indeed such arrangements are in place, governed by some internal rules. On a case by case basis an evaluation is being done whether information can be exchanged. The compliance officer of the FMA will assess compliance. The FMA also has working relations with especially the Ministry of Finance and with the deposit guarantee schemes operating in Austria.
