Paul Guyer, Gerard and Kant: Influence and Opposition

He Montaigne observed that it was difficult to believe considering the limited area taken up by any of her seven hills and particularly the two most favoured ones, the Capitoline and the Palatine, that so many buildings stood on the site. According to Lacroix du Maine, Montaigne, upon the death of his eldest brother, resigned his post of Councillor, in order to adopt the military profession, while, if we might credit the President Bouvier, he never discharged any functions connected with arms. When in a frenzy he is everything he desires to be in the art that dominates him.

Genius: Individualism in Art and Artists

Genius from the Renaissance to 1770

The author of the Essays was now fifty-five. Is it yet temperance and frugality to avoid expense and pleasure of which the use and knowledge are imperceptible to us? Its first product, Leon Battista Alberti's On Painting De pittura, written in 1436, a prophetic work of great perspicacity, contains the program of the modern emancipated artist. The popular inclinations resemble a tidal wave; if the current once commences in your favour, it will go on of its own force to the end.
