Holinshed thus describes the same event : In 1321, when the Barons rose against the Spencers, the Earl of Hereford, Lord Roger Mortimer of Chirke, and Lord Roger Mortimer of Wigmore, took this city ; the castle being also surrendered unto them by the Constable. The stone was merely one that had been dug up while getting out the ground for the foundation of the house; and was of the rudest shape, about two feet in length, eighteen inches in width, and ten inches in depth. General Putnam is a man highly esteemed with us; he has done me the Honor to appoint me his first Aid-De-Camp. Passionate opinion and violent action were the general faults of their time. That they however did so meet and make then an election, the following entry, found in the records of the Baltimore County Court for 1693, folio 126, fully proves.
