Finding a Beautiful Escape in Illuminated Manuscripts < Literary Hub

Many wax impressions from impressive seals survive on charters and documents, although Romanesque coins are generally not of great aesthetic interest. The kakapo, a chunky parrot from the dinosaur age, for example, was rediscovered still living deep in the Fiordland bush in 1958.

Carolingian art

Odbert himself was also an artist and he has added his name to a Psalter now in Boulogne. In the small figures the Anglo-Saxon drapery style remains and the figures seem as animated as ever, but the decoration of the border is more controlled, and the portrait of St Augustine is quite different.
