Community Coalition Simulation: Experiential Learning of Community Psychology Practice Competencies by Tom Wolff & Gregor V. Sarkisian in GJCPP Volume 4 Issue 4 2013

We focused on the time series corresponding to the variation of the number of prey and predator individuals and the individuals' positions. Thus there are many factors affecting the genetic diversity and fitness and controlling values of correlation between them. This study allows us to show that the relation between genetic diversity and fitness changes based on time and other features such as reproduction rate, population size and spatial dispersal.
