We will be applying for permanent recognition within eighteen months of the end of this implementation period. This is because in times of stress investors find emotional comfort in investments which they hear about regularly and which offer the promise of short-term returns. And the activities between these three key building blocks are interconnected.

Inflation, Expectations and Monetary Policy

Sustained Negative Yields Likely Policies likely to continue to be geared towards aggressive stimulus in both the fiscal and monetary spheres as a result of the economic impact of COVID-19, says Robin Marshall, director of fixed income research FTSE Russell.
