Ex

Andreas sometimes tried to downplay his influence and his company's. He dropped out of Wheaton College in Wheaton, Illinois, to help his father and older brothers take over a bankrupt grain and feed business in Cedar Rapids, Iowa. Playing the game included cultivating personal relationships beyond those donations.

Archer

Even Whitacre, who strongly criticized Andreas after his own arrest, years later called him a visionary. Lowell Andreas was an ADM board member and its president from 1968 to 1972. Playing the game included cultivating personal relationships beyond those donations.
