We previously focused on purpose and audience and why they are so important in Non-Fiction Writing.

Look at the list of key elements on the left.

Which of these elements are your strengths in Non-Fiction Writing? Which areas do you need to spend more time working on?

How many of these elements are affected by the purpose and audience of text?

How does purpose and audience affect these elements? For instance, paragraphing changes depending on what you are writing, why you are writing and who you are aiming it at.

Students with autism do not easily understand nonverbal communication such as body language, facial expressions and tone of voice. Since teachers are not having to project their voices, there is much less stress. Also, when voices are projected, the integrity of the speech signal may be compromised, as the softer consonants cannot travel as far, and are masked over by the louder consonants.

What are the Characteristics of Good Teaching in an Inclusive Environment?

For each quest, students will use a different method to create the mood- through setting, tone, or genre. Imagine what it felt like to this student to have another adult who could communicate with him in his way in his classroom community. Part Two-Students will write a story that represents the mood.
