Oxford Public International Law: Mixed Courts of Egypt

All pleadings are filed in French, all arguments are carried on in French, all deliberations take place in French, and all judgments are handed down in French. It only extended to simple police cases contraventions , and to 1 offenses committed directly against the judges and officers of the Courts while in the exercise of their functions, as force or violence or bribery; 2 offense committed directly against the execution of the judgements of the Courts; 3 crimes imputed to judges and officers of the Courts, when they have committed them in the exercise of their functions, or in abusing their functions. The establishment of the courts, hearing disputes between Egyptians and foreigners and between foreigners of different nationalities, was so successful that new, so-called Native courts were set up in 1883, after the.
