Growing up absurd; problems of youth in the organized society : Goodman, Paul, 1911

A commercially debauched popular culture makes learning disesteemed. That youth want meaningful work, said The Times Literary Supplement, is a tautology.

But still it does give the entire argument an undertone that makes one wince. But now these places give a new and quite different impression, maybe because time has passed or because they have taken a new meaning in Lilly's inner map of the town.

Growing Up Absurd by Paul Goodman

His father has brought him up as a dodo.
